The evening was “an opportunity to recognize some of the young talented people we have in New Jersey,” said Tom Bergeron in the video, managing editor of NJBIZ.

“The Forty Under 40 event is a way for us to reach a new generation of business leaders to bring in the next generation to understand how to do it, because, as we know, they’re the future,” he said.

The young professionals who received this year’s award were not only honored at the event, but received praise throughout the business community.

“If you look at these people, they’re not only successful business people, but they contribute to the community,” Timothy P. Duggan, chair of Stark & Stark’s bankruptcy and creditors’ rights group, said in the video.
